

John Tomko

John Tomko is a veteran media and entertainment executive with extensive experience in creating and managing content and negotiating deals. In 2020, he joined The Cartel where he represents writers, directors, and personalities.

In 2019, John produced “The Perfect Date” for Netflix; it’s one of the company’s most watched original movies. His clients have created shows in development at HBO, TNT, Warner Bros., and Starz, and numerous other clients are currently on the staffs of broadcast, cable, and streaming shows. John also represents clients in unscripted television, like author and food historian Simon Majumdar, who are content creators and on-screen personalities.

Previously, John had a successful career in feature film production and development. He developed and produced the movie “Falling Down” for Warner Bros and ran Jerry Weintraub Productions where he developed and oversaw three movies for the company including “Ocean’s 11”.

A graduate of Yale University and Harvard Business School, John lives in Sherman Oaks, CA, with his wife and dog.
